Make a list of all derived equations

One way to do equation checking and derivation is to try to compile a list of all equations derivable from the canonical equations.

- A student equation is correct if it is equivalent to one on the list

- Each equation on the list has associated with it a list of sets of equations from which it can be derived. Presumably the student used one of these sets.